Nailing Your Marketing Strategy

What is infographic and why is it important for marketing presentations?

I asked myself the same questions a few years back. I assumed, it is just one of those countless application or software that kept popping like mushrooms. But no, this is not a tool that flourished overnight.

Visual representations have already been used throughout the centuries but are exhibited variously and developed over the years. On the 21st century, we have infographic (a computer software) which stands for information graphics for effortless and efficient visual illustration. Unlike before when it was done by hand - a couple of markers, papers, rulers and pens (well, that was the classic). Infographic has the biggest impact nowadays; this is the digital age after all.

To answer the second question "why is it important for marketing presentations?" I'm pretty sure we are all aware of what marketing is and why we see banners and ads every time you log in to your LinkedIn account. Some ads are even more annoying that even if you just accidentally hovered your pointer, it brings up a huge page saying I need to subscribe to get rich easily - that's marketing and advertising to you.

Let's bump this out for a bit and understand the impact when infographic is integrated with your marketing strategy. In the discussion about VAK (visual, auditory, kinesthetic) Learning, it talked about the 3 types of learners - visual, auditory, and kinesthetic. Approximately 65% of the human population are visual learners. Although people receive input from all the 5 senses - sight, touch, feel, smell, and taste.

The primary sense to gather more information is the sense of "sight" because 50% of the human brain is dedicated to the visual functions and images are processed faster than

In Retrospect of Social Media

The Awakening

Do you remember that time when there were social media sites without advertisements? Those were the good old days when Myspace was literally my internet space (yes, I am a bit old school and had the chance to use media sites that were the predecessors of Facebook), and Farmville wasn't running a gag on South Park. Why was there such a violent upheaval of ads in every nook and cranny?

When did the domination begin? What will the future be and how many more ads must I sift through just to see a video? Let's dig a bit, shall we?

When did the massive giant plugged into our everyday lives become infected with monstrous banners and sparkly ads telling me that I need a nose transplant? It trickled here and there. A few markets had such success that they're targeting us... I mean the digital crowd and prepubescent video gamers, and other companies saw this trend. Facebook though was aiming for the throat.

Why? Why did we let this happen? Relax, it's not entirely our fault. Companies like Facebook, Twitter and all the 150-word-or-less stuff don't just mystically appear on your computer and phone through the acts of Gandalf and Harry Potter. These awesome and famous things we generally call social media sites require servers, lots of codes and power for the servers to maintain that very cool function called the "like" button. It probably has as much codes as the Linux Kernel to work. What I'm saying is, the resources to sustain these websites up are not cheap and this is where the advertisers come in. "Just a little banner" they say, "a hardly noticeable banner". So, it's either that or people pay for memberships, which is what actually happened to some sites where the number of users are way, way below Facebook users. If you put it this way, it isn't so bad after all.

Of Privacy and Perception

When you search for the best deals or share news to your friends in Facebook, your audience is bigger than you know. Why? That is because everything you do online will be recorded on the servers which will technically leave your cyber footprints. I'm pretty sure I left a lot of trails when I started with these stuff. Back to the topic, ethical concerns are raised when using social media for academic research because of the information collected by private companies.

A PARTNER YOU CAN RELY ON

About Us

We are fired up about welcoming you to our WoodBows' family.

This is John, I gave my heart to Christ when I was 27 in the USA. I hold an engineering graduate degree from the University of Houston, Texas, USA.

Having come to the USA from India, I saw a huge difference between India and USA. In USA, entrepreneurs and businesses are struggling to get talents to work for them whereas, in India, some of the best talents and engineers have been looking for jobs for several years. I thought of bridging both of them together.

Having built five businesses from the ground up and being an entrepreneur myself, I can absolutely understand how it feels like to manage the time.

All of our workers are engineering graduates with excellent English fluency and reliable professionals.

Our aim is to help you as much as possible to grow your business and save time.
